For years, writing guru Lisa Garrigues has been teaching women how to chronicle their experience of motherhood, whether they consider themselves writers or not. Now, with the publication of her book Writing Motherhood: Tapping into Your Creativity as a Mother and a Writer, mothers everywhere can learn to use writing as both a tool for recording their lives and a path to self-discovery. Part instruction manual, part inspirational treatise, her book will be available at the USR Library by April 10 for $20. In time for Mother's Day!
